The award of the scholarship will become effective when the admission of the selected applicant to his/her intended school has been confirmed. The scholarship will not be awarded to the selected applicant when such an applicant fails in obtaining permission for enrollment before the end of March, 2017 (the end of Japanese school year 2016).

The grantee shall sign up for the NHI at the municipal office where the grantee registers as a resident. (See the Section 8 hereof) When medical treatment for illness or injury is received, 70% of the cost will be covered by the NHI.

12. Japanese Language

It is important for foreign students to know and understand Japanese language to such an extent that they can pursue their study and research at the graduate school and spend social life in Japan. Some Japanese graduate schools require Japanese language proficiency to certain level. The Foundation recommends that each grantee study on his/her own account Japanese language prior to or while living in Japan.
