Overview of Hitachi Scholarship for 2017

The Hitachi Global Foundation strives to realize its mission by providing support to promising faculty members at the universities in Southeast Asia through the Hitachi Scholarship. The goals of the program are to promote:

1. Development of human resources of the universities in Southeast Asia contributing to improvement of education, enhancement of collaboration and cooperation among the universities in Southeast Asia and Japan.
2. Development of a collaborative network among university faculty members in Southeast Asia and Japan.
3. Enhancement of cultural understanding and closer relationships among Southeast Asian and Japan.

The Hitachi Scholarship consists of the following two programs:

The Hitachi Scholarship Doctoral Program

This program is offered to university faculty members who would like to take a Doctoral Course in science and technology at a Japanese graduate school. The program has been devised to encourage scholars to return to their universities to continue their educational and research pursuits after completion of their studies in Japan. Under the program, a total of 182 faculty members has been invited since 1985.

The Hitachi Scholarship Research Fellowship

This program has been devised to encourage university faculty members who would like to conduct short-term post-doctoral research in science and technology. The program has been devised to allow fellows to enhance their professional backgrounds and to promote academic collaboration through development of relations with Japanese universities and institutions. Under the program, a total of 192 faculty members has been invited since 1986.
